show upward trends in all things equestrian over the past fifty years. Will that trajectory continue, adding year after year to the current ten million population, or will loss of open spaces turn the tide as it limits horse housing and riding room? Will ownership patterns undergo fundamental changes when population density, land

A show pony transported into a class of hunter ponies with their more workmanlike appearance, substance and limb combined with strong, straight movement designed to cope with heavy going, would look totally out of place. The show pony is supremely elegant , graceful and full of quality yet still possessing adequate bone.

population of horses and ponies in Germany amounts to approximately 1,200,000. This substantial number is especially notable, as the horse and pony population has increased fourfold over the course of the last 40 years. Currently, of these horses and ponies, more than 100,000 are registered with the FN for breeding purposes and another 500,000 for
