A smart meter is an electronic device that records consumption of electric energy and communicates the information to the electricity supplier for monitoring and billing. Smart meters typically record energy hourly or more frequently, and report at least daily. Smart meters enable two-way communication between the meter and the central system.

This week saw the launch of a new report entitled Smart Power, which investigates the future of our electricity supply. It comes from a new body â€” the National Infrastructure Committee (NIC), and highlights the hole in supply caused by the planned closure of two thirds of our existing power stations by 2030, providing recommendations on the changes that they believe are required to ensure ...

1. Introduction. By 2050, agricultural production will need to increase substantially to feed growing and urbanising populations, particularly in sub-Saharan Africa (SSA) and South Asia. Estimates of the increase needed vary between 25 and 70%, depending on the assumptions made about efficiency and consumption pattern changes (Alexandratos and Bruinsma, 2012; Hunter et al., 2017).

Left: An EMR-emitting device attached to a telephone pole. Right: A cell tower. Since microwaves easily flow through most construction materials, “smart” meters attached to the outside of homes (or huge banks of them on multi-unit dwellings) broadcast a perpetual barrage of Group 2B radiation directly into the interior of inhabited buildings and right through all human flesh within range.

Reduced Food Waste. Project Drawdown defines reduced food waste as: minimizing food loss and wastage from all stages of production, distribution, retail, and consumption. This solution replaces current reported trends in food waste by region. Estimates suggest that 30–40 percent of all food produced worldwide is wasted across the supply chain (Smith, P. et al., 2014).
