In circus and vaudeville acts, a target girl is a female assistant in "impalement" acts such as knife throwing, archery or sharpshooting. The assistant stands in front of a target board or is strapped to a moving board and the impalement artist throws knives or shoots projectiles so as to hit the board but miss the assistant.

Target concentration is typically not considered in drug discovery. However, if targets are expressed at relatively high concentrations and compounds have high affinity, such that most of the drug is bound to its target, in vitro screens can give unreliable information on compound affinity. In vivo, a similar situation will generate pharmacokinetic (PK) profiles that deviate greatly from those ...

The above example deals with predominantly neutral compounds (no significant ionisation at pH 7.4) and so the logD 7.4 values are not significantly different to their logP values. The difference between logD 7.4 and clogP is due solely to inaccuracies in the clogP calculation. Ionisation may be significant for some chemical series and this needs to be considered in the application of LLE.
