The Aqueduct[™] tools enable users to measure, map, and mitigate water risks around the world with its open-source, and high-resolution platform. It uses multiple data layers to display water risks at any given location. Current water risks can be compared to those in the future, to visualize trends for optimistic, pessimistic, or business-as-usual climate and growth scenarios.

The focus of industrial roundwood production is moving towards harvesting from plantations. Between 1980 and 1995, the extent of plantations doubled to 180 million hectares, an area the size of Mexico []. They offer the potential for high yields of fast-growing species on small areas of land, off-setting the cost of planting, and offering a viable source of timber where accessible natural ...

For the first time in history humans are predominantly urban. Cities occupy less than 2 percent of the Earth's land surface, but house almost half of the human population and use 75 percent of the resources we take from the Earth []. The statistics of urban growth in the late 20th century surpass any other demographic indicators.

Koreans are very family-orientated. Family members are very loyal to each other and dedicated to maintaining their nexus (characteristic of collectivist societies). In some traditional/rural social circles, families can be so defining that they are perceived as having a collective face. Therefore, the act of an individual can impact the perception of the entire family by others.
