Commodity futures trading is speculative and involves substantial risks, and you should only invest risk capital. You can lose a substantial amount or all your investment, and you should care-fully consider whether such trading is suitable for you in light of your financial con-dition.

Trading Commodities and Financial Futures: A Step-by-Step

For example, assume you bought 10 CBOT silver futures contracts at a price of $4.50 per troy ounce and posted initial margin. At the end of that trading day, the market closed at $4.55. As a result, the market has moved in your favor by 5 cents per troy ounce, or a total of $500 (for 10 contracts).

Trading in futures can provide considerable financial rewards.

To profit from the price decrease if you are right, you consider buying a put option with a strike price of $495 an ounce. The option would give you the right to sell a specific gold futures contract at $495 an ounce at any time prior to the expi- ration of the option.
